

... Or Be the Change You Want to See

- If you consider that voters should get credit for election results;
- If you strive to set a role-model for society;
- If you disagree with the way political issues are being handled;
- If you choose to vote for the qualified and the skilled;
- If you believe SRC elections are more than results in a newspaper;
- If you want to fight for your rights;
- If you prefer to vote for an idea and for a change;
- If you expect candidates to submit academic platforms;
- If you hope to raise the level of political maturity;
- If you prefer to vote solely for AUB and higher academic life;

Voting blank is an effective way of expressing dissatisfaction with the current state of affairs. Blank ballots actually get counted; and unlike election boycotts they cannot be confused with apathy. They therefore provide a clear signal that things need to change. But they do not change anything by themselves... Only your active participation can.
